by several Western papers which supported the government but do not relish the idea of being tied up to an agreement of this kind. The News may cite the fact that the tariff on agricultural implements still stands, despite the fact that the miners, newspaper, and everybody else is demanding that the farmer buy more machinery and carry on production on the largest scale possible. The important point is not whether the Unionist members from Western Canada signed an agreement to not demand the removal of the duty on agricultural implements, but the fact that the duty is still on, and is on by their consent. The fifty-four Unionist members from Western Canada hold the duty of the government in their hands. If they demand that the duty be removed from agricultural implements, the duty has to go. The existence or non-existence of the alleged agreement is in a sense important, but the more important thing is the fact that the Western Union members are standing pat for the retention of the duty on farm implements.

Hercule Measures.

Objection to the Military Service Act in Canada has been expressed in the expression that it would "make Quebec the Ireland of Canada." Premier Lloyd George appears to have launched upon a policy that is very likely to make Ireland the Quebec of Great Britain. He is up to the people of the other provinces of Canada against the Province of Quebec, so it appears that the policy of Lloyd George is to array the people of England, Scotland and Wales against Ireland, also on the question of compulsory military service. In hope, no doubt, of lessening the threatened resistance in Ireland, he proposes to make a more than even rule. Just whether that will make conscription more or less acceptable in Ireland is another question. In fact, to Great Britain, remains to be seen. It may be that the course adopted is the best way of dealing with the situation. It may be that the Irish situation in Ireland is the only condition upon which the people of England and Scotland would consent to the further measure of conscription.

The reason for this heavy importation of steam coal, chiefly by the railway, is that the Pennsylvania coal was a better fuel for locomotive use than the Alberta coal could be supplied as cheaply, but because having a great wheat tonnage going east to Port William had cars and power without loads coming west and they reckoned the charge for the back haul on the Crow's Nest line would be clear profit. As a result the bituminous coal mines of Alberta have worked under a serious disadvantage from the railway. The railroads, their chief customer, only took coal from them when they could not get it from Pennsylvania. And it seemed to be a matter of religion (or as they call it, business) with the railroads that coal from Pennsylvania of any kind.

Of course for the railway service required in the region adjacent to the Crow's Nest line, coal was used, and with the extension of railways new fields were opened up. There never was any question as to the quantity or quality of Alberta steam coal. It is as good as the best. There is a large annual export from the Crow's Nest group of mines in Alberta to the United States amounting in the quarter of 1917 to over 50,000 tons. The Crow's Nest mines are situated in the Rocky Mountains comparatively near the summit of the Pass. On the west side of the summit in B.C. the mines having the same quality of coal have direct rail connection with the Great Northern railway system and supply all the needs of that system in the United States on the west side of the mountain.

It would be natural to suppose that the demand for Alberta steam coal would depend somewhat on the crop conditions of the prairies and that a large crop would mean brisk coal mining. The contrary was the fact. The more wheat there was to ship east the more empty trains there were to haul coal west, so that a big wheat crop meant greater importations of Pennsylvania coal, and corresponding decrease in production of Alberta coal. It was an economic anomaly to have the Canadian railways playing the Canadian wheat crop against Canadian coal. The fact that the coal production cannot thrive against such national business methods when ever and above that, Alberta railway services are discontinued, Alberta coal miners through out of employment, and Alberta coal investments to the public thereby are times to practice "thrift."

Alberta Steam Coal

On February 25th last, a government report was issued concerning the daily local train service between Edmonton and Vermilion on the C.N.R., and between Edmonton and Hardisty on the C.P.R. until April 10th, and substituting a service three times a week each way. The people living along these lines were placed under serious hardship and disadvantage in the transaction of their business with the city of Edmonton and the city suffered in its business to a corresponding degree because of the order.

The through trains on the section nearest Edmonton on both roads cover the distance at night both ways. The day locals are therefore a very great business advantage and convenience to people living along both lines.

Train services were reduced on various roads throughout the West at the same time as in the case of those out of Edmonton. The reason assigned for the reduction of the day locals was, then seriously affecting the Eastern States and Eastern Canada. It was not given as a reason for decreasing Western services that there was a shortage of coal in the West. It was merely stated that the day train services had been decreased in the East they should also be decreased in the West. For general information and with a view to the future it may be stated at this time to place the facts regarding the Alberta coal production in the East.

The shortage of coal in the Eastern States had no effect whatever upon the question of transportation or fuel supply in Western Canada. The steam coal mines of Alberta have, ever since they were opened, supplied the railway and the mines and were fully as well able to supply the demands of Saskatchewan and Manitoba as of Alberta; notwithstanding the fact that a half million tons of bituminous (steam) coal was imported from Pennsylvania in 1916.

The reason for this heavy importation of steam coal, chiefly by the railway, is that the Pennsylvania coal was a better fuel for locomotive use than the Alberta coal could be supplied as cheaply, but because having a great wheat tonnage going east to Port William had cars and power without loads coming west and they reckoned the charge for the back haul on the Crow's Nest line would be clear profit. As a result the bituminous coal mines of Alberta have worked under a serious disadvantage from the railway. The railroads, their chief customer, only took coal from them when they could not get it from Pennsylvania. And it seemed to be a matter of religion (or as they call it, business) with the railroads that coal from Pennsylvania of any kind.

Of course for the railway service required in the region adjacent to the Crow's Nest line, coal was used, and with the extension of railways new fields were opened up. There never was any question as to the quantity or quality of Alberta steam coal. It is as good as the best. There is a large annual export from the Crow's Nest group of mines in Alberta to the United States amounting in the quarter of 1917 to over 50,000 tons. The Crow's Nest mines are situated in the Rocky Mountains comparatively near the summit of the Pass. On the west side of the summit in B.C. the mines having the same quality of coal have direct rail connection with the Great Northern railway system and supply all the needs of that system in the United States on the west side of the mountain.

It would be natural to suppose that the demand for Alberta steam coal would depend somewhat on the crop conditions of the prairies and that a large crop would mean brisk coal mining. The contrary was the fact. The more wheat there was to ship east the more empty trains there were to haul coal west, so that a big wheat crop meant greater importations of Pennsylvania coal, and corresponding decrease in production of Alberta coal. It was an economic anomaly to have the Canadian railways playing the Canadian wheat crop against Canadian coal. The fact that the coal production cannot thrive against such national business methods when ever and above that, Alberta railway services are discontinued, Alberta coal miners through out of employment, and Alberta coal investments to the public thereby are times to practice "thrift."

running in Eastern Canada the time has certainly come to lay before the people of Canada as fully as possible the present importance and future possibilities of the coal mines of Alberta, so that in future they may be dealt with on the basis of an important industry of unlimited possibilities, whose operation and development is sufficiently important to be a matter of national concern.

That rail transportation in the prairie West of Canada should be held in dependence on Pennsylvania coal at a time when the Pennsylvania mines have been unable to keep up the needed supplies in their own country seems so unnatural as to be impossible and yet it is the fact. It is a condition that is evidently artificial. The Alberta steam coal beds lie in the easterly slope of the Rocky Mountains all along the western boundary of the prairie district. From Winnipeg, at the eastern end of the Crow's Nest line, is from 800 to 1,000 miles by direct rail haul with a down grade easterly all the way. The distance from the Crow's Nest line to the mouth of the Red River is about 1,000 miles from the port of Cleveland on Lake Erie. There is a lake haul of about 100 miles to Port William, which is 425 miles from Winnipeg, with a heavy grade to summit rising from Lake Superior.

The distance from the Pennsylvania mines to Winnipeg is about 1,600 miles, of which 600 is through the Allegheny region, which is transshipments and one shift up-grade against a total all rail haul down grade of 1,000 to 1,000 miles. The quality of the Pennsylvania coal for argument's sake, that in actual cost of transportation the Alberta coal is as good as that of Pennsylvania, as there are in fact at least as many natural disadvantages as compared with Pennsylvania in supplying steam coal through the Canadian Prairie West.

The several bituminous or steam coal areas lie in the several southwest river basins of the prairie. The Crow's Nest line is the furthest south. Next to it is the Brazeau, and then the Bow and the Saskatchewan and the Jasper Park on the waters of the Athabasca. The Crow's Nest was opened about 1899. The Brazeau was opened about 1900. The Bow and the Saskatchewan were opened about 1911, following the extension of the Grand Trunk Pacific main line to the Jasper Park area. The Crow's Nest was the first of the C.N.R. system to the mine on the Brazeau, west of Red Deer.

Edmonton is more especially interested in the Jasper Park group of mines than in the mines or groups further west because this city and district is the base of supply for that group, and the country served by the mines is that of the prairie West for all time. The whole West is interested in the development of the market for Alberta coal and in the consequent increase in payroll at the mines. The prairie West is having the coal to sell is more deeply interested than the other provinces who buy, but do not sell. And Edmonton is more deeply interested in the Jasper Park mines than in any other because any increase in their business means increase of business for the city.

The Jasper Park are the most recently opened of the prairie coal mines and have not yet reached an output equal to the Crow's Nest field, but their increase is from 361,000 tons in 1916 to 550,000 tons in 1917 and 611,000 in 1918. The number of men employed during the last three months of 1917 was over a thousand. The Jasper Park coal field is large enough and has enough coal in sight to itself supply the prairie West for all time. It has the great advantage for marketing purposes that it is on the transcontinental line of both the G.T.P. and C.N.R., giving competitive distribution throughout the prairie, and to the west through both the northern and southern portions of the province to the ports of Prince Rupert and Vancouver. Investments, distributed by the prairie West, are being made. Further northwest than the Jasper Park mines now being operated on the railway lines, and also on the easterly slope of the Rocky Mountains, is the Smoky river coal area about 80 miles distant from Brule station and Brule mines on the C.N.R. and G.T.P. These Smoky river beds are said to be of a high grade of anthracite, containing up to 92 per cent. fixed carbon. They are situated on the Smoky river between the mouth of Sulphur creek and Sheep creek, and extend for many miles up Sheep creek and as well up a small tributary of the Smoky called Muskogee creek. Some prospecting work was done in the winter of 1912-13. The outbreak of war stopped further work. It would be possible to construct a railway from Brule or Brule station to the mine. This would bring the trade by way of Edmonton, but, of course, under present conditions there is no possibility of anything being done in the way of railway construction.

As a factor in present production this field is to be considered, but when the question of ultimate coal supply is being discussed it is well to know that it is there. The greater part of the output of the bituminous coal mines for locomotive use, a considerable and always increasing proportion of their product is used in stationary boilers for raising steam and for central heating of buildings. The output of the Alberta bituminous coals are on an average equality with the Pennsylvania coals in heating power, and in fact are of a higher quality in every other particular. While there are considerable variations in the quality of the Alberta bituminous coals, as there are in the Pennsylvania product, the Alberta average is as high as that of Pennsylvania.

The difference in quality between the various coal beds of the prairie West is a practical problem, but it is not a matter of difference in the material which constitutes the coal, but merely in the greater or less of the pressure to which the former have been subjected because of the upheavals that made the Rocky Mountains. These upheavals, caused by mechanical pressure, but not by volcanic action, have raised coal beds that had lain a thousand feet or more below, before the upheaval took place, to or near the surface, where they are now being worked. Whatever reasons may be urged against the sub-bituminous Alberta as against the bituminous Pennsylvania coal, no such argument can be raised against the Alberta bituminous. The householders whose storage room is limited or who wishes to lay in a stock of furnace coal early in the season will find the Jasper Park bituminous coal meet requirements as well as the Pennsylvania bituminous.

Situated, as the mines are, or near competitive railway lines this coal has every advantage in securing shipping facilities. It can be delivered from the mine at all points throughout the prairie West. Its use does not require any change in the furnace used for Pennsylvania bituminous coal.

In order that the mines may produce to the best advantage—that is, give the largest possible output at the lowest possible cost, the operators must know months beforehand what calls will be made upon them. The Pennsylvania coal that is used in Manitoba and Saskatchewan in the winter is mined during the early summer. It must be in order to reach the Lake Erie region in time to catch the return trips of the grain laden lake vessels. The whole of the tonnage needed by the area to be supplied during the winter and the months from December 1st until the end of April must be landed at Port William by the last week of November at latest. Unless the orders for Pennsylvania coal were given the mines not less than six to ten months before the winter required it could not be supplied in the quantity and at the prices. Alberta mines should be given the same chance to plan their work ahead in order that they may get their operating costs down to the lowest possible figure. The rates from the mines to Winnipeg and intervening points should be fixed having regard to the building up of a mine industry of the largest proportions and the greatest importance, not as though the coal industry of Alberta was an economic interloper to be kept out of the field of demand as far as possible. Money paid for Alberta coal is money circulated in the Canadian West. Money paid for Pennsylvania coal is money circulated in Pennsylvania and will never be seen in the Canadian West again.

WHY?
From Ontario, Journal-Free, Editor: Colonel Mackenzie King, Minister of Finance, has been in the news for some time in connection with the disturbances, but why should he be? The chief Minister of Finance, the indirect cause of the Quebec riots, have been approached at all?

BOHRASIN IN COMMAND
From London, Editor: The keynote of the riots in Quebec is heard in its leadership. Armand Lavergne, chief lieutenant of Bouras, is the man to whom the rioters listen, and to no other. They even go so far as to carry an assault upon the mayor's house because he dared to make known their demands. And Lavergne seems to have control when which the state and which are ignored. Bouras is in command in the Quebec riots, have been approached at all?
